Dear Mr McCluskey

I note that your union has publicised a dodgy 'dossier' called "Government Links to Private Healthcare", naming 71 coalition MPs who you allege have links to private healthcare and you have given this story to the Daily Mirror.

My entry in your dossier is inaccurate and I request that you remove my name from it and cease further publication.

You imply that I have worked for JP Morgan while a member of the Government when, in fact, I ceased to be employed by JPMorgan in 2008, when Labour was in power. I don't own any shares in JPMorgan or any other investment that benefits from JPMorgan's financial performance. They manage some of my pension savings, as they do for many members of Unite the union.

Simple fact-checking would have prevented Unite from making this elementary mistake. You have also spelled my name wrong, further undermining the accuracy of your dodgy dossier.

No doubt, in your research, Unite has discovered that former Labour Prime Minister Tony Blair – you know, the one who won three elections for Labour? - is a senior advisor to JPMorgan.

Yours sincerely

Harriett Baldwin
